but how do i enable it ?? there are quite a few different potential causes. I would suggest running a hardware test on the machine to see if that provides better clues. For the case of the sound, though, you might be able to load a module that provides the driver that the device uses. That would be one possibility. i have ubuntu 17.10. i have problems with drivers of a tvtuner device. sometimes i can view channels, sometime no (only static) fckdk: what TV tuner? dvico dvico fusion hd tv tuner pci 1 fckdk: should be working out of the box on 17.10 fckdk: or maybe you need the firmware Anyone having issues with their left-alt key in Ubuntu? I've tried with a new Acer Aspire Switch 10 SE which has an X230 instead of the usual X1 keyboard layout and had the same problem as I did on another machine with a Y460p. AltGr (Right Alt) works fine. Hello. I have a "raspberry pi" on my LAN with 4 static IPs assigned to it. How can I "remap" the NIC so that it gets a different IP from the router (so the router sees it as a different device) without moving it? fckdk: type in terminal> sudo modprobe bt878 then turn TV on and see if it will work
