1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a concentration control method for an electrolytic alkaline solution and, more particularly, to a concentration control method for an electrolytic alkaline solution used in a solid oxide fuel cell, and a fuel cell produced by applying the same.

2. Description of the Related Art Currently, in line with increasing concerns for environmental problems, the development of a fuel cell is under way as a clean power source. A solid oxide fuel cell has a high energy density and can output high power with no pollutants or noise, and thus, is expected to be applied to household, commercial, and stationary power generation systems. For example, technology is being developed to apply the solid oxide fuel cell for vehicles and railway locomotives. An anode of the solid oxide fuel cell operates at a high temperature of about 1000° C., and an electrolyte is required to be able to withstand this heat. For
