Every time you change something, you should take a snapshot, say 100px centered. All I do is save this, then make the image an HTML background and take the HTML as a PNG. What's up with the whole process? I can do it in about 90% of the items I work with, and then it's all easy. This is soo easy now, I swear. But I've yet to find a way to handle custom or non-standard fonts, images, etc. If I did, I'd take the HTML source and just simply embed the CSS. Whatever. As long as it works for now, I don't care about the future. Shazaam acquires Are You A Human? Within the past year, the Internet community has come to know about a pair of new services called Are You a Human? (AYAH) and Shazaam by Gracenote. Both of these services play songs or similar audio files and attempt to recognize the audio. Since the introduction of these services, we have seen numerous tweaks, fixes and new features brought in. Following is a look at what you can expect. How it works? Both of these services rely on a video camera or microphone and use recognized audio samples from various songs. The service then tries to identify the song and allows the user to buy the track. It would help if you use a real, digital video camera to avoid recognition errors, and to ensure that the two services can accurately identify your song. Because of the ambiguity in determining the speed of the songs and their rhythm, the services are very susceptible to different types of songs. For example, if the song is drum and bass, its rhythm will not be near as regular as a classic power pop song, such as one by the Beatles. In other words, if it is in rhythm, it will be difficult for the services to recognize it. What sets them apart? Both of the services have slightly different features. Are You A Human? will allow you to submit or upload a video while Shazaam takes a video of you as you play a song. After that, the services will try to identify the song from the uploaded or sent video clip. The two of them differ in the fact that Shazaam has a direct comparison option, which means that they will suggest songs from the same genre, the same artist and even the same song. In other words, it will look to compare your song to other songs

EzDeploy is a tool for remote management and deployment of computer applications and programs. The software enables you to deploy programs on a number of remote computers at the same time, by making them run with a specified set of options. It is a centralized tool, meaning that it presents one user interface (UI) which enables you to manage and deploy programs on a number of remote computers. You can install the program on the other computers, as well as monitor their progress with a number of predefined tasks. By default, EzDeploy enables the program to be automatically downloaded from the server and installed on the remote computer. This is an important feature, as you don't have to spend time on customizing it, as well as you don't have to worry about making sure it downloads the right version. However, you have the possibility to install and run the program manually. Otherwise, if the set of options you are looking for is not available, you can use a custom configuration file to improve its performance. Additional functions include logging the user's actions, as well as enabling you to add entries in the scheduled tasks list, among other options. Features: Remote management: You can deploy programs on a number of computers remotely, by simply using the provided UI and sending them to the desired host. You can monitor the state of the program, look up the reported problems, as well as change its behavior by using options. Automatic updates: You don't have to worry about updates, as EzDeploy makes sure the necessary ones are taken care of by itself. Thus, you can keep the local software up-to-date without waiting for someone else to do it. Program customization: You have the option to choose the settings manually, by using a config file. If you are not satisfied with the default configuration, you can override it, as well as change the order of the tasks. Built-in tasks manager: This is an important feature, as you don't have to use additional programs to keep track of the tasks you want to run. You can view and manage a list of the installed tasks, which enables you to run as many as you want, by selecting an entry in the list. Multi-platform: The application is compatible with many operating systems, as it supports Windows, Linux, Mac OS X, and Microsoft Windows Phone.
