Q: HTML form submission not working but works with internal link I have a HTML form which submits to a page that looks like this, "> "> And I redirect the URL to other page by setting $.GET['title']. This works as intended, although the page that I send the form to does not have the name of that page. However, if I use the value of the name of the page which I want to go to (in this case, the word "view"), this does not work. It is not redirected and instead I get error 404. I know the route exists because it works if I set the form's action to localhost/path/to/route. I've tried using the name and id of the element, setting other hidden parameters to check for error or other errors, but I cannot get my form submission to work. What am I doing wrong? A: Try this: "> "> Redirecting Q: Will an app installed from an external SD card be reinstalled from a file on the SD Card, or will it be automatically deleted? Android permits apps to be installed onto an external SD
