As a teenager he experimented with the use of light in domestic and architectural spaces, and later used it as a medium to engage with man-made phenomena such as bridges and antennas. During the 1990s he undertook several installations for the exhibition at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York, entitled The Ocean. Using sparse ornaments, repetition, and light, Fontana transformed the museum's landscape. He also worked with William S. Burroughs in 1992. He also worked with William S. Burroughs in 1992. Although his installations and works of lighting utilize light, Fontana's sculptures have addressed the human body. Using the tools of his trade, he reproduces the skeleton from their bones. He then takes a running start from the ground and ends up balancing on a piece of metal or on a series of scales created by the bones and the volume of the 595f342e71
