Justina Pelletier: The PM's daughter who died in Canada after eating a tainted 'frozen banana' with her father Justina Pelletier was diagnosed with an aggressive form of cancer and made her last public appearance in April as she underwent chemotherapy Her father, Charles, and mother Jodi attended proceedings at Massachusetts General Hospital Justina was granted US citizenship in 2011 and moved to Massachusetts with her parents A Massachusetts mother has battled cancer since she was a child and her daughter, who has the same disease, was healthy and happy - until she was diagnosed with cancer, aged just ten. Justina Pelletier's first public appearance was last year, when she was a cancer survivor and cancer free. Now, her mother is back on the public stage to share her testimony. Jodi Pelletier is here to tell her story of battling cancer, losing her child and at one point, losing everything in her life. Scroll down for video Justina Pelletier told the Boston Police Commission her father, Charles, and his girlfriend, Jodi Pelletier, are her 'very best friends' Her mother told the Boston Police Commission they 'get along really, really well.' 'We're pretty much of a family,' she told the broadcaster. 'We have a lot in common, besides the fact that we have a nine-year-old daughter who has cancer. 'We're very, very close. We talk every day.' Mrs Pelletier has been asked to testify in front of a US Federal grand jury investigating new health claims made by manufacturers of the popular allergy treatment drug EpiPens, in which her daughter could have been 'over-dosed' with the life-saving anti-allergy drug. Ms Pelletier said she is being questioned by lawyers from the US Food and Drug Administration and wants to explain her life and their shared medical journey. 'I'm here to tell you my own story and my reason for being here,' she said. 'I want you to
