We talked about the connection between male privilege and its tangible manifestations in law and in the US political arena, and we talked about the similarities of his and my work as women in the legal arena and as feminists. We talked about how his being a man and my being a woman meant that his experience had been easier. We talked about the constant misrepresentation of female activists by the media and the law, and the silencing of women's stories, especially when there are white men in a room. And then we talked about the centrality of Sandra Day O'Connor to American culture as the first woman Supreme Court Justice. From that conversation, I learned something about Mark:

Brain-derived neurotrophic factor (BDNF) is a member of the neurotrophin family of neurotrophic factors that plays a critical role in the development and maintenance of central nervous system neurons. Association of BDNF with its receptor TrkB plays an important role in the survival and differentiation of neurons. The central nervous system BDNF level is downregulated in Alzheimer's disease. Our previous study suggests that decreased stability of binding of BDNF to TrkB may be associated with downregulation of BDNF. Here we determined the binding kinetics of BDNF to TrkB using TrkB-transfected BHK cells and found that in Alzheimer's disease the stability of BDNF-TrkB binding was decreased.Google Wednesday released a new version of the Google Play Music app for Android and iOS, nearly three months after it first started rolling out a new design.
