December 12, 2010. REUTERS/Jason Reed An unexpected pullback in the global equity market was the main market theme on Tuesday as a trading-day sell-off was capped by positive news on the economic outlook, but aggressive traders remained nervous about market turbulence. An early-morning rally in global equities had fizzled out as bank-led selling took its toll, with the Dow Jones industrial average down 1.1 percent and the S&P 500 declining by 1.4 percent. By the time the close bell struck, the blue-chip gauge had fallen by more than 100 points. Shortly after 10:00 AM, news reports emerged that the Bank of Japan will expand its trillion dollar stimulus program, offering more dollars to ailing Japanese banks and encouraging money into the country's markets. This boosted sentiment and stocks picked up a little momentum until the selling pressure reasserted itself at 11:18 AM. As the dollar index reversed course, the euro gained against the dollar and markets turned their attention to a possible Israeli strike on Iran in which neither country faces imminent threat. Bank of America's rise in October helped ease some of the pressure on the broader market and a turnaround by European Central Bank President Jean-Claude Trichet at 11:23 AM boosted markets. The market's reaction was dampened by an economic report that showed U.S. gross domestic product unexpectedly contracting in the third quarter. The S&P 500 lost momentum 648931e174

The serial number of this crack package refx vanguard is.This invention relates generally to media devices for use in digital television, and more particularly to a media storage system for use in a cable or satellite television system. In recent years, the cable and satellite television industries have seen an increasing rate of adoption in home television systems. Unlike older systems, such systems are now being offered with the ability to record and store television programs onto a digital storage medium for subsequent playback and viewing. Cable television systems, for example, generally offer the capability of recording between a few hours to a few days worth of programming. These days, the typical user no longer has to deal with a conventional "VCR", and instead is presented with a number of different options for recording television programs. Although these systems and their associated media devices offer a number of different recording options to the user, they do not provide any means of organizing the recorded programming for each user. Instead, it is left to each user to maintain their own personal recording schedule. Since each user is left to maintain his or her own personal schedule, new program recordings often go unrecorded, and cannot be given more attention during busy viewing times. For example, a user may be instructed to record a program during a particular week, but fail to do so due to work or other prior commitments. As a result, it may take days or weeks before the user goes to record the program. When recording the program, the user may experience a great deal of frustration if the user is unable to remember which programs were recorded previously. Furthermore, since recording systems are not typically integrated into other home operations, the user may not record programs while performing
