In the past, I've suggested that we need a system that is about more than the high and the mighty. We need to revitalize the spirit of play that comes with the feeling that we are not the masters of our own fate, but temporary actors in a drama that is unfolding in front of us. This is not a bad thing to want. I would rather want to play with something than sit on my ass reading or watching tv. However, I would suggest that we need a system where play is never encouraged. It can only happen when people have solid foundations, otherwise they will always be looking for ways to gain advantage. We cannot go on like this. We are not going to be able to justify the creation of a society that denies the dignity of the individual and which makes him or her an object to be used for the growth of a multi-billion dollar business. We need to look at the way people are being produced and controlled. I watched an excellent documentary called "The Secret World of Money" by Alex Gibney. It shows how people are fattened up for sale and then they are discarded. We have to take pride in that our public schools force people to do well in order to get into a good college. The argument that everyone should attend college because everyone should be college educated is an ideological fudge. We need to start actually valuing education for what it is – a means to an end. And that end, it seems, is to give people a certain image, a certain set of skills, a certain self esteem and so on. We do not need to take pride in this – in fact, I want us to back away from this kind of thinking. It is not to our advantage and it is not to the good of society. It is not even to our advantage as individuals. It is a kind of self-destructive hubris that is driving us to ruin. In the same way that our society has fallen prey to the culture of production, we, the producers, have become so accustomed to producing people and never think about what we are producing. This is why our public schools are producing people who are not educated, who believe in the "goodness" of the system, who know only how to play by the rules, who are addicted to drugs, who desire only to make money and maybe to have some fun. We are afraid of failure. We are afraid of disruption. This is not

During FY14, the materials characterization laboratory has conducted a wide variety of nanomaterials research for the global nanotechnology community, focusing on the examination of two basic properties: size-dependent solubility and the relationship between the size-dependent solubility of NPs and the specific surface area. In addition to size-dependent solubility, the investigators have also demonstrated that the mechanical behavior, adsorption behavior, and biocompatibility of NPs can be simultaneously changed by changing the surface area of NPs. These findings contribute to the development of new drug delivery systems and new nanosensor materials. and cope with it. If this was not the moment of your life, I would already be complaining about the circumstances of it all. I just want this to be more than the usual. As far as I'm concerned, I'm stuck in a dream world. At first it was a place where I could live in a safe environment and watch the Universe play. As the years passed, it felt more like a prison, especially since I feel locked up in my own mind. Sometimes I feel so enslaved by it I would wish for it to disappear from my life. Sometimes I wish the veil was already lifted and I could just experience life. But the reality is that until I have learnt how to 'embrace my life', i.e. at least accept my circumstances and live with them, the veil will remain. Until I have learnt to embrace my life, it will stay. The only way I see to move on is to destroy the wall of veils in my mind. After so many years of practicing Tibetan Buddhism, I've heard the Karmic Law taught quite often: Until you destroy the wall of veils in your mind, you will remain living in a dream world. You've got to beat the fog of your 'self' first. This is where I'm at now. I've read about this quite a bit. In many Buddhist teachings the whole world is a dream and your life is merely a movie. Nothing is what it seems, everything is just an illusion (Buddha). So we were led to believe. I have a bit of the Dalai Lama in me. I believe the world is more than just a dream. I believe life is real. But I haven't been able
